TENURE OF THRONE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED

King Gustave's Appeal to People of Sweden Entirely Successful.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

KING GUSTAVE'S appeal to the people of Sweden has been successful, and his tenure of the throne firmly established, by the result of the general election which has just taken place in this kingdom. He had virtually staked his crown on the outcome of the contest. He had dismissed from office Premier Staaf, and the Liberal Cabinet, although they possessed a big majority in the lower house of the national legislature, and after intrusting the office to a Conservative administration, had ordered a general election, so that the people could have an opportunity of expressing the approval or disapproval of what he had done.

Gustave had been at daggers drawn with his Liberal ministers. They had declined to admit the urgent necessity of placing upon a sound footing the naval and military defenses of the country, sufficient to protect its neutrality. His ministers had likewise taken the stand that he could hold no communication with his subjects, save through them, had sought to restrict his constitutional prerogatives in every fashion, and had even made no secret of their leanings toward republicanism. To such an extent was this the case, that had the Liberals won the day at the general election, King Gustave would have had no alternative but to abdicate, while the antagonism which had prevailed between the Liberal Cabinet and the crown prince, while the illness last year, would have rendered his accession to the crown a matter of impossibility. The Liberals, however, have now been defeated at the general election, and the people of Sweden, having been practically called upon to choose between the Bernadotte dynasty and a republic, have cast their vote in an overwhelming fashion in favor of the monarchy, in the person of King Gustave and of his house.

St. Margaret's Church at Westminster.

ster, which was the scene of serious militant suffragette disturbances a few days ago, is one of the oldest of English churches, but is to such an extent overshadowed by the immediate vicinity of Westminster Abbey, that it too often escapes the attention of tourists from this side of the Atlantic. And yet it should have a special interest for them. For Sir Walter Raleigh's headless body was entombed in the chancel, after his execution in Old Palace Yard in 1618, and some twenty years ago a fine stained glass window was presented by a number of American citizens to the church as a tribute to his memory.

Within the walls of the church the High Court of Chivalry was held in 1387 by Richard II., to decide a dispute between Sir Robert Grosvenor, the ancestor of the Dukes of Westminster, and Sir Richard Scrope, as to the right to bear the coat of arms, azure a bend or. After more than 500 witnesses had been examined, among them being Chaucer, the court finally decided in favor of Scrope. In April, 1611, the House of Commons attended divine service in St. Margaret's, for the first time in its official capacity, and since that day the church has become, to quote the official records of Parliament, "a national church for the use of the House of Commons."

The glory of the church is its celebrated east window, made at the end of the fifteenth century for Henry VII's chapel in Westminster Abbey, but which was placed there instead. It contains a representation of Prince Arthur, son of Henry VII. Among the memorials in the church is that of Caxton, who for a number of years signed the parish accounts, as auditor; while others entombed there include Skelton the first poet laureate. The church at one time contained the bodies of Admiral Blake, of Pym, Stroud and other leaders of the Commonwealth. But on the restoration of the monarchy, Charles II. caused the bodies to be removed from within the precincts of the church, and to be flung pell-mell into a pit dug for the purpose in the churchyard, that is to say, in consecrated ground.

RICHMOND FOLKS ASTONISH DRUGGIST

We sell many good medicines, but we are told the mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-I-ka, is the best we ever sold. Richmond folks astonish us daily by telling how QUICKLY Adler-I-ka relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach and constipation. Many report that A SINGLE DOSE relieves these troubles almost IMMEDIATELY. We are glad we are Richmond agents for Adler-I-ka. The T. A. Miller Company, Druggists, 519 East Broad St.—Advertisement.

The London Official Gazette contains the announcement that the Prince of Wales has appointed George Cave, K. C., to be his Attorney-General. George Cave is a Unionist member of Parliament for the Kingston Division of Surrey, was for sixteen years chairman of Quarter Sessions, is recorder of Guildford, and belongs to the Tory stronghold, the Carlton Club. As Attorney-General to the Prince of Wales, it will be his duty to look after all the legal questions that may arise in connection with the administration of the prince's duchy of Cornwall, and to furnish to the help apparent any legal advice of which he may stand in need.

It is on comparatively rare occasions that the Attorney-General is called upon to appear in court in behalf of his royal client. Thus, the last instance of the Attorney-General of the Prince of Wales appearing in any trial was when Edward VII., prior to his accession to the throne, was summoned as witness in the case of Sir Gordon Cunningham against the Wilsons of Tranter Croft, popularly known as the buccarot case, and before that, in 1876, when the same prince was called in the Mordaunt divorce case, and cleared by a jury of his countrymen. George IV. before becoming King, had recourse far more frequently to the services of his Attorney-General, notably in connection with his troubles with his Brunswick consort, afterwards Queen Caroline.

The duties of the office of Attorney-General to the Prince of Wales are not particularly heavy, and if the appointment is coveted, it is on account of its social prestige, rather than for its legal importance. It is invariably held by a distinguished member of the bar, the immediate predecessors of George Cave having been Sir James Thesiger, Sir Charles Hall, and Charles Alfred Cripps, who has been raised to the peerage as Lord Parmoor.

It is singular that at the very moment when ex-Lieutenant Charles Glen Collins, of the Cameron Highlanders, should be again in trouble with the police in Chicago, Baltimore and New York, his nemesis, Miss Ethel Clinton, formerly of New York, who came into the limelight on this side of the Atlantic four years ago, should have been figuring in the London courts in connection with a gambling transaction. Glen last in America she styled herself "Princess Solytkoff," and as the widow of Prince Dmitri Solytkoff. But she had no right to the designation. For the prince never married, and in his will, which was admitted to probate by the Court of Probate in London in January, 1904, he makes no mention of wife or widow, but leaves to his "friend," Miss Elizabeth Bushnell Clinton (an American), an annuity of $10,000 a year, and a sum of $10,000 in cash, the residue of his very large estate going to his brother, Prince John Solytkoff. Prince Dmitri had, indeed, been married, while a young man, to a countrywoman of his own, daughter of a Boyar, John Yakoleff, who was master of the ceremonies at the court of St. Petersburg under Nicholas I., and in the early years of the reign of Alexander II. But she died after only three or four years of happy union, leaving him with a boy, who followed her to the grave at the age of fifteen. It was after that Dmitri Solytkoff settled in England, where he spent the remainder of his life. Elected member of the English Jockey Club, he was the first and only Russian to enjoy that distinction, and was, moreover, the only foreigner to ever fill the office of steward of the Jockey Club; the three stewards of that organization constituting the supreme tribunal of Great Britain in all racing matters, as well as a species of high court of honor of English society.

The Solytkoff family furnished an Empress to the reigning dynasty of Russia, in the person of Feodorovna Solytkoff, who married Czar Ivan IV., and thus became the mother of Empress Anna. Nicholas Solytkoff was the first to receive the princely title, for his victory over Frederick the Great of Prussia at the battle of Kunersdorf. The sold-dant Princess Solytkoff's trouble with Glen Collins was due to her having conceded to him some valuable porcelain vases for sale for $5,000, and her failure to obtain from him either the money or the return of the vases. She ran him to earth in one of the principal hotels on Fifth Avenue, in New York, where a somewhat sensational scene occurred, which subsequently engaged the attention of the New York tribunals, the affair resulting disastrously for ex-Lieutenant Collins.

DRIES SKIN ERUPTIONS RIGHT UP END ECZEMA WITH SULPHUR USE LIKE COLD CREAM TO STOP ITCHING

The moment you apply bold-sulphur to an itching or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a renowned dermatologist. This remarkable sulphur, made into a thick cream effects such prompt relief, even in aggravated eczema, that it is a never-ending source of amazement to physicians. For many years bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous eruptions by reason of its cooling, parasite-destroying properties and nothing has ever been found to take its place in relieving irritable and inflammatory affections of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure, yet, in every instance, it immediately subdues the itching irritation and heals the eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again manifests itself. Any good pharmacist will supply an ounce of bold-sulphur cream, which should be applied to the affected parts like the ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded is very welcome, particularly when the Eczema is accompanied with tortuous itching.—Advertisement.
